Supervisors Use LUDOs To Deliver Better Customer Service

The concept of LUDOs - lay-out-under-duress - originated from the military, and was first mentioned in 2008 by Tim Peake, the British astronaut on his way back from the International Space Station. LUDOs is based on the military's "Soldier's Last Resort" concept, which is to ensure all forces that are critical to the mission are able to function, even in an extreme situation. For instance, you might discover in advance that your vehicle has faulty brakes, but how do you decide which one is the most critical to your mission? Identify the criticality of a task based on the probability of its failure and the impact of that failure on mission success. Then prioritize that task based on its likelihood of failure. LUD
